ONCOLOGIST APPROVED

Skin reactions including dry skin are a common side effect of treatment.

Recommend with Confidence

Researched and approved by our team of oncologists and oncology-focused pharmacists to not interfere with treatment.

Our specific ingredients including urea, ammonia lactate, silymarin, vitamin B6 and vitamin E support relief from hand and foot syndrome without the risk of interfering with treatment.

Description

In addition to skin reactions cancer patients frequently experience hand and foot syndrome. These issues may occur indefinitely during and after treatment.

Hand-foot syndrome is a condition that affects the skin of the palms of hands and the soles of feet. Some chemotherapy medications or targeted therapies can cause this condition. It manifests as redness, dryness, peeling of skin, cracks in the fingers or toes, and pain. This can be disabling at times, often delaying the treatments.

Details

1. What causes the problem, that is specific to cancer patients?

- Chemotherapy and radiation therapy.

2. What does it do?

- There is no specific treatment for this condition. However, there are studies suggesting the benefit of urea, ammonia lactate, and silymarin, vitamin B6 and vitamin E in preventing or limiting this unpleasant condition.

3. Are we avoiding any ingredients?

- Salicylic acid is avoided which can sometimes cause skin reactions and even systemic reactions such as nausea, vomiting, confusion, coma, respiratory failure and in rare cases death! While there are several urea creams using 40% urea, our product contains 20% urea to minimize any potential side effects.

Discussion

Have you considered the non-pharmaceutical aspects of your patients' treatment? Most physicians don't have time to research the thousands of supplemental products available today. Many patients are concerned about whether they are doing everything possible to assist in their wellness. They research it themselves on the internet and ask friends and family for advice in choosing supplements. This process may be detrimental or interfere with their treatment protocol.

4CancerWellness's team of oncologists and oncology-focused pharmacists research each supplement carefully, ensuring that they will not interfere with treatment or recovery. Doctors and nurses can therefore recommend 4CancerWellness supplements to their patients with confidence. Patients will also feel reassured knowing that their supplements were recommended by their doctor, increasing good will towards the practice.
